

population control. Animals, under stress, such as in times of a drought, reduce their sexual activity, not so humans, who in times of misery exercise their only bit of fun, copulation, and their gods will look after starving youngsters. Religious fanatics who for hundreds of years did not have much influence on human behaviour have now turned financially very rich because of the oil under the sandy wastes where they live and the racist religion of the imams, sheiks or sultans of these countries are now driving their uncultured and hungry populations for whom they have no use, towards Europe in a great effort to get those countries under Muslim control. The Europeans, as yet, seem not to have understood the threat, not surprising as socialism has rendered them impotent for any thoughtful actions.

They have of course their priorities; sacred soccer, marriage between poofers and the adoration of their many royalties. Soccer I played as a kid, I was told I was quite good at it but the only thing I found interesting in that game was how you could make a round football with small 5-sided and 6-sided pieces of leather. I found out that the geometry was quite complicated.

When we lived in France, my wife and I got on well with a number of homosexuals, often pleasant people and most of them very clever and artistic. They did not make a spectacle of themselves as these fellows do today and would I have a guesthouse I would refuse them a room thinking what disgusting things these chaps get up to at night.

Why once quite rational countries keep on paying for their royalty jokers is beyond me. Murderer Franco as a last bitter joke before he died inflicted upon the Spanish people a perfect royal example, a crook and philanderer who loved to kill elephants as long as he had plenty of game rangers to help him. Almost all of this European royalty lot have been bred from inbred Teutonic families and have their particular taints but they all love their gaudy uniforms, red, blue, lots of gold. That old prince in England dons all his expensive gear for the slightest occasion, maybe by now he has forgiven his wifey for not taking his name 'Mountbatten', free translation from Battenberg, Jawohl! But Lizzy wanted to remain a Windsor, good try, Philip. Read the UK Daily Mail to appreciate the madness that governs the European Union.

Muslim against Christian; Black against White; America, broke but still warmongering on credit against the rest of the world since WW2; and we should abolish racism? With a lollipop?
